Overview of Training:

This online course will help you to plan and provide activities and resources which support the journey from mark making to accurate letter formation and understand how Physical Development contributes to children being 'ready to write'.

Course Content:

Part One- Readiness to Write:

- an opportunity to examine how each strand of the area of learning for Physical Development is an essential part of 'readiness to write';
- an opportunity to look at a variety of activities and resources to support the development of core strength and co-ordination, gross and fine motor skills;
- advice on how to set up activities in different areas of continuous provision which support 'readiness to write';
- a wealth of ideas to develop different aspects of physical development that may be barriers to children being 'ready to write'.

Part Two- Moving from Mark Making to Letter Formation:

- an understanding of the importance of mark making activities and how they prepare children for the introduction of letter formation;
- how to use a variety of mark making tools that support the development of comfortable grips;
- opportunities to explore activities using a variety of easily-resourced mark making tools in all areas of continuous provision, including the use of the outdoor area;
- how a multi-sensory approach to letter formation impacts on progress in Reception;
- advice on moving from mark making activities to letter formation.
